SANTANDER HOLDINGS USA MAINTAINS CAPITAL STRENGTH IN SEVERE SCENARIO, BASED ON FEDERAL RESERVE STRESS TEST

- The Federal Reserve objected to SHUSA’s Capital Plan for qualitative reasons
- The Federal Reserve did not object to the payment of dividends on SHUSA’s outstanding class of preferred stock

Boston, March 11, 2015 – The capital ratios of Santander Holdings USA, Inc. (SHUSA) would remain securely above minimum regulatory requirements under the severely adverse economic scenario of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (FRB), according to stress tests conducted by SHUSA and the FRB as part of its Comprehensive Capital Analysis Review (CCAR).

However, the FRB informed SHUSA that it objects to the company’s capital plan on a qualitative basis due to widespread and substantial weaknesses across capital planning processes. The FRB did not object to the payment of dividends on SHUSA’s outstanding class of preferred stock. However, all capital actions remain subject to a prior approval by the FRB in accordance with SHUSA’s Written Agreement¹. The FRB objected to the requested payment of dividends on common stock of Santander Consumer USA Holdings Inc.

SHUSA’s Tier 1 common ratio was 11.0% at September 30, 2014. Under the FRB’s supervisory severely adverse scenario, SHUSA’s Tier 1 common ratio would decline to a minimum of 9.4% during the forecast horizon, according to the FRB’s estimate. SHUSA’s regulatory capital ratios would therefore remain well above the required minimums of the CCAR exercise.

SHUSA Chief Executive Officer Scott Powell said: “These results confirm that Santander Holdings USA maintains capital well above regulatory minimums throughout the severe stress environments presented by the Federal Reserve. However, the qualitative assessment highlights that we still have meaningful work to do to meet our regulator’s expectations and our own standards of excellence.”

SHUSA non-executive Chairman T. Timothy Ryan, Jr., said: “We will continue to reinforce our governance and management to address our supervisor’s qualitative concerns. Changes in both areas are forthcoming.”

Details of SHUSA’s CCAR results were disclosed in a Form 8-K filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission today.
